Globalization for colleges and universities is no longer a competitive advantage- it is becoming an expectation among forward-thinking administrations and an incoming workforce with an increased focus on the global marketability of their degrees. Bahri-Mehra presents frequently to public and private institutions and trade associations about key steps counsel need to understand in making the decision to expand globally, including foreign policy development, strategic direction, formalizing the commitment, integrating faculty and curriculum, and sourcing international partnerships. Bahri-Mehra covers the legal implications of various delivery models, including franchising, twinning, distance learning arrangements, educational support services, JVs and strategic acquisitions. She also relies on her experience as a lawyer to communicate important issues involving intellectual property, entity structuring, tax, Exchange Control Regulations, cultural nuances, and transaction planning and execution.

Experience in Global Markets

Vinita works with educational institutions in Ohio and throughout the United States to achieve their international growth objectives. Several notable clients include: College of Wooster; Franklin University; Kent State University; RTI International; Wright State University; and Valparaiso University. Bahri-Mehra and the Global Education team she leads have assisted clients with projects in commercial markets all over the world.

Vinita has extensive international transactional experience, which allows her to navigate international projects seamlessly and cost-effectively. Whether a university or college’s educational niche is higher education, project-based learning, education support services, the part-time non-traditional student or graduate curricula, investing in a cross-border educational strategy makes sound business sense. Based on this experience, Bahri-Mehra is uniquely qualified to offer her unique global education insights to organizations worldwide.
